Can markets include and benefit the most marginalised people with disabilities?

- Markets can't solve inequality alone.
- However, if we really committed to the 'leave no one behind' agenda then they must the role in making sure the most marginalised people are given opportunities.
- To do that, market based solutions need to work harder to reach those who are most marginalize

MOST MARGINALISED PEOPLE LIVING IN EXTREME POVERTY.

Most marginalised people with disabilities face extreme poverty and social exclusion due to disability – part of 800 million living on less than $1.90 per day.

- At bottom of Economic Pyramid
- Primary education/ no education
- Basis assets – less than .5 ha land
- Face prejudice & discrimination

They live in outside economy; precarious informal activities – begging or reliance on family

A GLOBAL CALL FOR ACTION: HYBRID PARTNERSHIPS FOR CHANGE

LEAVE NO ONE BEHIND

Partnership should:

1st: The government must create enabling policies to empower people with disabilities to work in market.

2nd: Private sector integrate highly excluded group into market process

3rd: Social moments/DPOs connect those actors working in the market.

4th: NGOs work with private sector together to create better outcome for those who are farthest behind.

United Nations - CSocD should:

- 1. Convene a high level meeting on market based solution to extreme poverty and disability.
- 2: Develop global action plan consistent with SDGs & CRPD; the current World Action Plan is old of last century.
- 3: Deploy a standing mechanism in the Commission and other UN bodies to monitor progress of implementation of SDGs.
- 4: Organise disability session every year on the priority goal of SDGs.
